The Buildings

B could be persuasive, while A...? Pliant.

Inevitable result: B bristling with righteousness and
A in tears.

This had to stop, and shortly. The authorities tended to look the other way unless it went on.

Well, the latter. So both were summoned.

Was it to the Lilac Building or the low mustard one?

If Lilac, then both will be reminded of the precepts they had memorized as children.

If mustard, well, nobody has ever emerged from there.
B can tapdance his heart out, and A? Sob on forever.

Which critical one named in the summons?

Not saying for now, Boys and...Boys.
